From my point of view, grammar is a system of organizing a language in a complete sentence, or from the sites i'm really in. It is given as grammar recognizes how words and phrases come together to create meaning. It helps the students who are becoming to learn english from the beginning to colloborate with other people through the language and sure, it is clear that there is an immense role of grammar that it permits all english learners to express themselves and their speech clearly. And also without grammar words go together without any sensible meaning. In order to speak a language to some degree and to manage to say what we really want to tell the people we should have some grammatical knowledge. Apart from all datas above, it is stated that, i mean the Tanya Cotter said that: " By teaching we not only give our students the means to express themselves, but we also fulfill their expectation of what learning a foreign language involves". It is delighted to ask children that what ways or strategy they want to use for the first time while studying. It is important to know what students want while learning something new. And sure, it can help to study easier. Some learners want to offer some styles to teach from their inner side and the teachers should let them offer. From real life situation, for example:

- It helps me to understand better if I discuss things with other people.

- I get information better while im doing some kind of physical activities

- I don't like sitting at the desk, but study, for example, on the floor, on the bed, in all kind of places, or maybe it might be organized as a picnic. Sure, it would be on the ground which belongs to somewhere where you are studying.

- If I write something down, I remember it better.

- If I study aloud, I can get all datas easier or something I gave above as an example.

From teacher's point of view, sure, it doesn't mean while conducting they will not do any chopping, running or something like that, but you can give them a ten minutes break (at least a five minutes break) to do some physical activities.¹ Doing this with your students is another proof of how you are a great teacher, i think.

Well, let's move on the next part called "How to teach grammar to teenagers effectively". Actually, there are two approach to teach grammar:

- Deductive approach

- Inductive approach

From my perspective, a deductive approach of learning english is just the way of killing time. You not have any enjoyable learning sources and then sure that you have to learn all terminology of English and any kind of stuffs like rules. It is obvious that the deductive way of learning is based on only the given rules. Teachers tell you the rules and you will practise a lot. As Joan Didion said: 'Grammar is a piano I play by ear.'. I consider that it will not be to neither your nor your student's benefit if you teach only based on rules. For me and for my future students i can not utilize such kind of learning process. It should be more natural. In my own experience, the shooldboys and schoolgirls are completely into digital things such as phones, laptops and so on. That's why i prefer using presentations with the help of technology. Applying multimedia resources, you are able to attract the attention of students easier than a traditional ones. And you can teach the given theme interestingly. After lessons, you can share the presentation with your students. It is a fact that if your presentation is more attractive(I mean if it can draw the children's attention) and the students can get it to their mind, they will definitely open it and repractice what you taught to them. If I approach to these theme deeply, I will explain English learning process among the students who are around 11th grade. They are nearly around the corner, it means that students who are studying in a field of English are really in need of entering to the universities with the thinking universities of their mind. Because every decision, made by them, influences on their future life. So that, the first step, I mean that how to be studied the object that they want and why this subject was chosen, is crucial for them and the questions above are required to be explained by all teachers. The reason for this is when he or she gets to his or her mind why i should learn this subject better and when they get the answer for that, at that time they can gain all knowledge of their field and success in the future. For all of these, the role of the teacher and their methods of teaching are vital. When the students are in the mental process of English, teachers who are linked to them, should do a favor to their students from every point of the life. According to that, students see how the real teachers would be and because of this they will try to study harder, more and more better and become being a better teacher for their future students, too. Apart from them, teaching method or we can call it "strategy" is important when conducting a lesson. I consider that lessons should be organized in a modern way. For instance, with the help of some hand-outs, poster presentations or presentations as I stated above. So, with these, they can also gain some ways to teach and some useful hints to use with technology in near future. It is essential to study grammar because it helps learners understand the English language better. Grammar also gives many opportunity to them to get how sentences are formed and linked with each other. It also allows them to write good essays and articles that can be understood by people who do not know much about grammar.
