Abstract: Community orientation plays an important role in modern society. This field mainly includes activities aimed at solving social problems, protecting the interests of community members and improving their quality of life. Foreign experiences show how effective strategies can be applied in public orientation. In this article, we will analyze foreign experiences in the direction of the public and discuss how they can be applied to Uzbekistan.

Key words: public participation, social projects, foreign experiences, social networks, communication.

Community activities include many social projects. These projects are usually implemented in order to respond to the needs of the public, increase their participation and ensure social justice. There are many successful experiences of public orientation abroad. For example, Scandinavian countries use innovative approaches to increase public participation. These approaches are mainly aimed at taking into account the opinions of community members, involving them in decision-making processes and ensuring their participation in solving social problems. Public participation programs implemented in Sweden can be cited. These programs aim to involve the public in decision-making processes and take their opinions into account.

In Sweden, projects implemented through public participation usually show successful results in solving social problems. For example, projects implemented through public participation in solving environmental problems help to achieve great results in environmental protection. It is possible to show the social projects implemented through community participation in Canada. In Canada, community engagement programs generally aim to promote social justice, support economic development, and improve the quality of life for community members. Within these programs, various activities are conducted to identify and meet the needs of the public. Community participation projects in Canada generally play an important role in social sustainability. Social projects implemented through public participation in the USA can be cited. Public participation programs in the US are mainly focused on taking into account the opinions of community members and involving them in decision-making processes.

Within these programs, various activities are conducted to identify and meet the needs of the public. Projects implemented through public participation in the United States usually show successful results in solving social problems.

A number of important steps should be taken to implement foreign experiences in the field of community in Uzbekistan. First of all, it is necessary to develop effective mechanisms to increase public participation. These mechanisms should be aimed at taking into account the opinions of team members and involving them in decision-making processes. In order to increase public participation in Uzbekistan, various activities should be held in order to identify and satisfy the needs of community members. In order to increase public participation in Uzbekistan, it is necessary to make changes in the education and training system. To increase public participation, various trainings and seminars should be conducted to increase the knowledge and skills of the community members. These activities help encourage community members to participate in community activities.

In order to increase public participation in Uzbekistan, it is necessary to actively use social networks and communication tools. Social networks are an effective tool for taking into account the opinions of the public and involving them in decision-making processes. In order to increase public participation in Uzbekistan, various campaigns should be conducted on social networks.[1]

It is necessary to implement a number of measures for the development of public activities in Uzbekistan. These measures are important not only to increase public participation, but also to involve citizens in solving social issues. The issue of education and training should be given special attention. In order to involve in public activities, it is necessary to introduce programs that encourage public participation in the educational system. Schools and universities should provide courses on community service, social responsibility and volunteerism. Through this, it is possible to interest the young generation in public issues and educate them as active citizens. It is important to develop and support public organizations. It is necessary to provide financial and resources to expand their activities. Public organizations play an important role in solving social problems. Also, these organizations serve as a platform to unite citizens and express their opinions. It is necessary to use social networks and media platforms. To increase public participation, social media can be used to collect, discuss and involve the public in decision-making processes. Social networks also promote communication between citizens and become an important tool in shaping public opinion. Various activities should be held to encourage the participation of local communities. It is necessary to work with local leaders to identify local needs and increase their participation. Ensuring public participation in solving local problems helps to increase social stability. It is necessary to organize open discussion platforms to take into account public opinions and involve them in decision-making processes. Through this, the public can freely express their opinions and exert influence on important issues. Open discussion platforms are an effective tool for involving the public in decision-making processes. It is necessary to strengthen cooperation between the state and private sector in the implementation of social projects and programs. Grants and scholarships can be provided for the implementation of projects aimed at solving social problems. It is important to support public initiatives and implement social projects. In order to develop public activities, seminars, trainings and conferences should be held. These activities help increase the knowledge and skills of members of the public. Seminars and trainings play an important role in involving citizens in public activities.[2]

It is necessary to implement programs aimed at the development of social responsibility among enterprises and organizations. These programs, in turn, help increase community participation. Development of social responsibility serves to strengthen cooperation between enterprises and the public. In order to improve the efficiency of public activities, it is necessary to introduce monitoring and evaluation systems. These systems allow monitoring and analysis of the results of public participation. Monitoring and evaluation serve as an important tool in improving the effectiveness of public activities. As a last resort, it is important to study foreign experiences in the development of public activities and adapt them to the conditions of Uzbekistan. By developing cooperation with foreign organizations, new approaches and strategies can be applied. Foreign experiences help to organize public activities more efficiently.[3]

Conclusion:

Community orientation is important in modern society. Foreign experiences show effective strategies for increasing public participation and successful implementation of social projects. Effective mechanisms, changes in the education and training system, and active use of social networks are needed to increase public participation in Uzbekistan.

These measures play an important role in the development of public activities and solving social problems in Uzbekistan. Projects implemented through public participation will be important in ensuring social stability and improving the quality of life of community members.
